INTRODUCTORY NOTE

The Congregational Library was originally founded in 1830, chiefly by the exertions of Joshua Wilson, Esq., who presented nearly 4,000 volumes, many of them valuable and scarce. About 200 volumes were presented by R. M. Beverley, Esq., 90 by Sir John Bickerton Williams, LL.D., and other donors contributed liberally. For some years the Library was of great value to the London ministers; but in course of time literary tastes varied, there was no provision for the supply of fresh literature, and at length the Library was almost disused. When the Memorial Hall was first projected, a first-class theological library was part of the scheme, of which it was hoped that the existing store of books would form a nucleus. But years of delay intervened; the lease of the building in Blomfield Street expired, the books had to be warehoused, and many were destroyed by damp and rats. At length the Memorial Hall was erected, and Mr. Wilson added to his former benefaction the bequest of his invaluable collection of seventeenth-century pamphlets and miscellaneous Puritan literature. The late Rev. S. Newth, D.D., undertook to arrange the books, and eliminated much that was useless or obsolete; adopting, however, a more rigid rule of selection than that indicated in the scheme of the Trust. Under his direction the first catalogue, containing something under 8,000 titles, was printed in 1895. But already the Library had far exceeded that limit; and the catalogue excluded not only most of Mr. Wilson's bequest, but the large collection of Rev. T. W. Davids, which had been purchased from his executors.

Since then considerable additions have been made by purchase, donation, and bequest, and there are on the shelves at present nearly 23,000 volumes. The present catalogue is in continuation of that issued in 1895, and even so makes no pretensions to completeness. The Librarian has excluded the following departments, of which MS. lists can be consulted:—most books in languages other than English, about 1,600 vols.; that part of the hymnological section described as "Hymn-books," about 1,200 vols.; an interesting collection of liturgical matter, about 380 vols. and tracts; anonymous pamphlets, from A.D. 1600 onwards, above 4,000.

The separate sermons and manuscripts are still in course of arrangement.
